The fire department was called out by a still alarm at 9:30 o'clock Sunday morning for a chimney fire in the house at 11 Central street, occupied by F. W. Knapp. What little blaze was discovered was confined entirely to the chimney and no damage was done, although rooms in the upper part of the house were filled with smoke for a few minutes. As a safeguard against an outbreak of flames, one of the firemen remained on the scene after the chemical engine had departed.

Rev. E. O. Thayer, who was recently reappointed pastor of the Heddin Methodist church by the Vermont conference at Waterbury, preached his first sermon of the conference year at the church yesterday morning. The pastor devoted a few minutes to the children, giving a helpful little talk which appealed to the grown-ups as well. In an excellent sermon, delivered later in the services, Mr. Thayer spoke of the tercentenary of the English Bible and described at some length its influence on civilization during the last three hundred years.

"The Test of Friendship" (Edison)—A melodrama, presenting a life-saving episode, supposed to take place on the frame of a skyscraper, many stories above the street. It is a story of two men, wanting the same girl, but they do not sulk, nor swear revenge. One gives up, and works alongside the one whom he supposes to be more fortunate. Then comes the accident, and one barely misses falling to the street below, from which perilous position he is rescued by his comrade. Then, the rescuer, who believes himself unsuccessful, ultimately wins the girl. While the picture is melodramatic in the story it tells, it presents scenes which might actually occur, and therefore, has a stronger interest than it might otherwise possess. It refrains from representing the two men as fighting, something which deserves commendation. It accurately portrays the construction of a skyscraper, hence conveys valuable information, all qualities which will be recognized as important. It's at the Dreamland.
